WOMAN'S CLUB HEARS DESCRIPTION OF ANCIENT CITY

Miss Penny, of Watertown, Gives Illustrated Talk on Sicily.

The fifth regular meeting of the season of the Waltham Woman's Club was held yesterday afternoon in the parlors of the Universalist church. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Christina Fulton, who was called to Nova Scotia by the death of her sister, the first vice president, Mrs. Annie L. Hurd, presided. The music for the afternoon was furnished by Miss Esther Taylor, who entertained well with vocal solos. Mrs. Vera Ball acted as accompanist.

The program was in charge of the literature and history class, Mrs. Harriet L. Smith, chairman. The speaker of the afternoon was Miss Minna Elliot Penny of Watertown, who gave a stereopticon talk on Sicily. Miss Penny spoke largely of the picturesque Sicily, and called it the Garden of the Mediterranean. Miss Penny said that she landed at Messina after a rough trip. Messina was described as a very ancient city. Among the mountains Mt. Aetna was the most prominent. By means of the stereopticon Miss Penny showed Messina as she saw it and then and as it appeared after the earthquake. The contrast was startling. Messina was a Greek city up to 1783 when it was destroyed by an earthquake, which was followed by the building of a new city. Miss Penny said that the cause of the earthquakes being so frequent there was probably due to the fact that Messina lay in line with several volcanoes, including Vesuvius.

In riding along the beach there is a most beautiful contrast. The water is on one side, and on the other the terraced fields are cultivated, and the mountains tower above them. These hills and mountains are crowned by ruined citadels and little villages. Syracuse was formerly one of the most important cities of Sicily. It was originally a small island connected with the mainland by bridges, but after the Romans took possession it declined and has gradually grown smaller until now it is only a small island and [illegible]

There is a Christian cathedral there which is built around the ancient temple of Minerva. There is also the church of San Giovani, below which there is an underground church in which St. Paul is supposed to have preached. Miss Penny described the ancient quarries where the Athenean slaves toiled ages ago and these quarries are now objects of exquisite beauty. There are many beautiful colored stones overgrown with ivy that produce a charming effect. Miss Penny also described a Greek theatre made of white limestone.

Miss Penny said that one of the novelties of Sicily is to be seen in the street where the little carts are all painted and the pictures are of an historical and Biblical nature. The harnesses are ornamented with plumes and bells which are supposed to drive away the evil spirit.

Vercenti is one of the largest ports for shipping in Sicily. Great quantities of sulphur are shipped from there.

SCHOOL BOARD IS AGAINST COMMON DRINKING CUPS

Sentiment Unanimous and Preliminary Step for Abolition is Taken.

SUPERINTENDENT UPHELD

Was Justified in Excluding Kennedy Child From Kindergarten. Increased Registration.--Annual Reports.

The abolition of the common drinking cups in the public schools and the substitution of something more sanitary was the subject of quite a discussion last night at the final meeting of the school board for 1909. The subject was introduced last night by George D. Thomas, and it was the unanimous opinion of those present that some change should be made. Superintendent Parkinson stated that he had been investigating the subject since the attention of the school committee had been called to it some time ago by the State Board of Health, but he said that it was no easy task to find something that was free from objections.

The annual reports of the several sub-committees were made, but Superintendent Parkinson did not have his annual report ready. Those present at the final meeting were Mayor Walker, Clarence F. French, Dr. T. W. Temple, George D. Thomas, Dr. W. N. Emery, Frederick H. Bent and Harvey S. Hartwell.

Superintendent Parkinson reported that the civil service commission could certify only two names for positions as janitors, and therefore the school board was at liberty to make a provisional appointment of a janitor for the Pond End school. Mrs. W. H. Woolley was elected to the position at $100 a year.

In regard to the communication received at a previous meeting from the school board of Pittsfield regarding the licensing of newsboys, Superintendent Parkinson reported that no action was necessary, as there is a law already covering that point. While there are 100 boys from the grammar school selling papers here, there have been no complaints about their being on the streets late at night, and there is no occasion for their being licensed here.

Superintendent Parkinson reported the school membership to be about 100 larger than at this time last year. The indications are that this increase will be permanent and there is good reason to expect an increase the coming year.

Mr. Thomas reported that the aldermen had passed the order transferring certain balances in accounts as asked for.

DIVISION 1 REPORT

Dr. Emery made the annual report for division committee 1. The report stated that the graduating class from the High School last June was the largest in the history of the school, while the enrollment this term is not quite so large. The first year girls are now getting instruction in cooking, but they have to go to the North Grammar building. Provision should be made for them in the High School. The employment of a physical instructor for boys has been very beneficial and Mr. Dame is successfully carrying out the policy which the committee desires. The gymnasium in the High School is painfully inadequate. It might be well to have a suitable gymnasium in a separate building, where it could be available to the public at times, as well as to the pupils. The accommodations at the Pond End school are the most primitive in the city, not exceeding the city hall. The report was received and placed on file.

For Division Committee 2 Dr. Temple reported on the petition of the residents in the Roberts district for free transportation of pupils to the grammar schools, and recommended that provision be made in the annual budget for the coming year to pay for such transportation. The recommendation was adopted.

The annual report of Division 2 stated that there had been two changes of teachers in grammar schools occasioned by the offer of larger salaries elsewhere, and one change due to matrimonial exigencies. The present 5th grade is the largest in the history of the schools. The rooms in the South Grammar are poorly lighted and some improvement should be made. The manual training department in the South Grammar should be removed from the basement to the third floor. The report was received and placed on file.

For Division Committee 3 Mr. Thomas reported on the complaint made by Mrs. Mary S. Kennedy that her son had been forbidden entrance to the Hill kindergarten. The committee found that Mrs. Kennedy had promised to have her boy in school, on October 4 and that he was not present on that day; therefore, the superintendent was justified in forbid-

TO WOMEN

ITEMS OF PERSONAL NEWS

A woman has lately been made a judge in Denmark, and the Danish women are reported to be much excited. They think it is the first and only case of the kind in the world. To say nothing of Mrs. Esther Morris of Wyoming, Mrs. Catherine Waugh McCulloch of Illinois, and Mrs. Mary Cooper of Kansas, do not our Danish sisters read their Bibles? Have they forgotten Deborah, the wife of Lapidoth who judged Israel for 40 years, sitting under a palm tree, and led out the forces of the chosen people to battle, because the general refused to march without her? Mr. Blackwell was very fond of quoting Deborah to those who claimed that the Bible teaches the subjection of women; and he emphasized the fact that Deborah was a married woman. Years ago, during one of the many disputes that have raged in different states over the right of women to practise law, a Jewish editor boasted that a woman could be a "fighting judge in Israel" a thousand years before she could be an attorney in the United States.

Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, superintendent of schools, replies to A. P. Ballou's complaint that school children who sang at the Coliseum garden on Sunday were made "innocent participants in beer garden festivities." "Prof. Katzenberger, the director of music at the celebration, came to me," she said, "and asked permission to drill the children of the Forsaiville, Fuller and Willard schools for the German celebration. He wanted to hold the drills for three days at the school buildings after the children were dismissed. I refused him this permission. I did not think I had a right to introduce an outsider in any school as a teacher of music, or any school children sang and witnessed beer drinking it was because their parents allowed them to do so."

Princess Iphiana of Holland has joined the ranks of the caravanners. A marvelous construction—should it be called a "carambulator" or a "caravram"?—has been devised for the little Dutch princess wherein, when the weather is cold and the sun shines only in certain parts of the Hut Loo, she can be conveyed from the palace to the sunshine. It is, as a matter of fact, a giant covered perambulator containing a stove and seats for nurses, besides the bassinet for the royal baby; and it is, of course, drawn by a horse. If she were an English princess she would at once be nominated patroness of the Caravan club. The queen of Holland herself is said to have invented this new baby carriage for her daughter. It is not the first time she has displayed ingenuity of an inventive character.

Dr. Mathilda A. Evans of Columbia, S. C., has the distinction of being the first licensed woman physician in that state. She is a negro and the founder of a hospital and nurses' training school for colored people in Columbia. She was graduated from the Woman's medical college in Philadelphia and began the practice of medicine in Columbia about 10 years ago.

FASHIONS AND FADS

Silks which have all-over figures woven into the fabric have their own special name this season. They are called Falconne.

Ruffles appear on the left side of some of the otherwise tailored blouses—giving a dainty and very distinctly feminine touch.

Pretty blouses of Japanese silk, made with Dutch collars, are listed among the desirables belonging to the feminine wardrobe.

The wide wale serges, diagonal suitings and similar fabrics are playing an important part in the wardrobe of the up-to-date woman.

Satin and heavy ottoman silk buttons will be in good style, and tweed and worsted cloth bone buttons will be considered correct.

The flat of black velvet about half an inch wide, and finished with a tiny bow, either in front or to one side, is seen a great deal.

For between seasons there are some beautiful black silk hats made upon frames. Here satin and moire, ottoman and bengaline, are equally conspicuous.

Marquisette, which is used for dressy blouses, launders well and has a decided air. It is gaining in popularity as the season draws to its hight.

Irish crochet is seen on all the cloth and silk gowns, and insets of Irish crochet, large as well as small, ornament some of the waists of cotton crepe.

Dancing slippers, whether of patent leather or of velvet, now have several straps over the instep, each decorated in some manner with beads of tinsel.

CAKE

If a cake falls in the center the opening of the oven door and the consequent rush of cold air may account for it; too much baking-powder may have been used, or the mixing may be at fault. Never slam or bang the oven door for at least twenty minutes. When baking spongecake do not open the oven door for at least twenty minutes after the cake is first put in, for it will stop rising and spoil the cake. Always bake spongecake in a moderate oven, and it is ready when it begins to shrink from the sides of the tin. Cakes made light with baking-powder, soda or beaten eggs should be baked as soon as mixed. Therefore, they should not be mixed until all the ingredients are prepared and the oven heated. A quick oven will burn a gingerbread in a very short time, and is sometimes the cause of heavy pastry, and will cause a hollow in a very light cake. The fruit in solid cakes will sink to the bottom if they are put in a slow oven. Heavy streaks through a cake will undoubtedly appear if the butter and sugar are not thoroughly creamed; or if the butter is not properly rubbed into the flour.

Before beginning to mix cakes at all, see that the tins or molds are carefully prepared. For rich cakes the bottoms and sides of the tins should be lined with double paper cut to the size and well buttered. For plain cake have the tins perfectly dry, well greased and dusted out with flour and the paper dispensed with.—"The Household Interests," in the Ladies' World for November.

VOTES FOR WOMEN IN DENVER

"It was a decided mistake to give women the right of the ballot," says a woman politician of Denver in Woman's Home Companion for November. "But now that they have it, in my belief it is as much the duty of a woman to exercise that right as it is for her to observe her religious duties or to take proper care of her home. The average woman is better than the average man. At least that is my observation. The average woman politician is as bad as the average man politician—only she is worse. If the rank and file of women would join in one concerted move to unseat the unsavory professional man and the professional woman politician, then the right of franchise vested in women would prove a boon of inestimable value.

"Like many another woman, I entered politics with the idea of purifying the political atmosphere. Since then it has been a constant struggle on my part to keep my skirts clean. It is much the same thing as a woman marrying a man to reform him. In nine cases out of ten he drags her down to his own level instead of being lifted to hers.

"Women, generally speaking, vote to please the men. There are those who will take issue with this statement, but it is nevertheless true. Perhaps it may be different after the women are better educated in political affairs, if that time should ever come but under existing conditions the women vote as the men suggest. Left to themselves and uninfluenced by the men the women vote would be chaotic. We wouldn't know where we stood in election till after the votes were all in, because women are influenced by all manner of things the ordinary mortal would not reckon with. By way of example, a really handsome man is a strong asset for any political ticket in Colorado!

"Women are by nature of a trusting disposition in everything save love affairs. It is therefore an easy task for the men to control their votes. For that reason in planning a campaign we decide upon candidates and principles that will appeal to the men and then leave it to them to win their wives, mothers, sisters or sweethearts over to their views."

good health, with its blessings, must understand, quite clearly, that it involves the question of right living with all the term implies. With proper knowledge of what is best, each hour of recreation, of enjoyment, of contemplation and of effort may be made to contribute to living aright. Then the use of medicines may be dispensed with to advantage, but under ordinary conditions in many instances a simple, wholesome remedy may be invaluable if taken at the proper time and the California Fig Syrup Co. holds that it is alike important to present the subject truthfully and to supply the one perfect laxative to those desiring it.

Consequently, the Company's Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna gives general satisfaction. To get its beneficial effects buy the genuine, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, and for sale by all leading druggists.

AUBURNDALE.

Auburndale will have a chance to play basketball now as the result of efforts made by the Auburndale Improvement society. A room in the old Ash street schoolhouse has been fitted up with the necessary apparatus and will be open to the young people of Auburndale under the supervision of the forestry department.

The new year was ushered in at the Centenary Methodist Episcopal church by a watch meeting at which a large number of the parishioners gathered. Services began at 8 o'clock. An address by Dr. William C. Gordon of the Congregational church was followed by an informal social evening till 11.30 when there was a holy communion service conducted by Rev. John Matteson, rector of the Church of the Messiah.

HEALTTH BOAAD MAY WIPE OUT DRINKING CUPS

Waltham physicians aprove of the attitude of the Evening News on the question of providing individual drinking cups for the pupils of the Waltham schools, and parents are expressing themselves as grateful that the school board has been stirred to action—action that should have been taken many months ago, they assert.

The matter should not however, be allowed to rest with the school board alone. While the danger in the fountain is not as great, as adults are susceptible to contagion than children, there is still considerable danger to the general health of the community from the use of the common drinking cup particularly as tuberculosis is exceedingly prevalent in the city.

Railroad stations and Pullman cars throughout the country are doing away with the public drinking cup in response to the demands made by the health authorities. The officials of the Waltham Board of Health are seriously considering the question, and it is probable that action will be taken toward abolishing the drinking cup in all public places and requiring the use of individual cups, if any are provided.

At the Waltham watch factory there are no drinking cups used in common. The employes furnish their own or borrow if they want a drink. This, while a vast improvement to the public cup, is by no means as satisfactory as it might be made, for the passing of cups from one to another, either because some have neglected to provide themselves or because it is more convenient to use somebody else's, leaves the door open for the communication of disease.

HATTIE LEBLANC GOES TO GRAND JURY TUESDAY

No Prospect That Indictments for Others Will be Sought by District Attorney.

Tuesday next be evidence collected by the prosecution against Hattie Le Blanc on the charge of killing Clarence F. Glover, will be presented to the grand jury of Middlesex county. A large number of Waltham witnesses are expected to be summoned, including Inspector McKenna, Officer Tully and George F. Leslie, who took the dying declaration of the murdered man.

It is the expectation of the prosecution that District Attorney Higgins, who will conduct the case in person, will ask for an indictment for murder in the first degree, notwithstanding the pressure that has been brought to bear upon him to seek an indictment for manslaughter only.

There is, however, little fear that the prosecution will endeavor to secure a conviction for murder when the case goes on trial in the superior court. The Waltham police are not anxious to have any more serious charge than manslaughter brought against her, and it is said that the district attorney is disposed to deal as leniently with the child as is consistent with his duty.

It was intimated yesterday afternoon that the State officers who have been working on the case would endeavor to secure the indictment of two others in connection with the murder. There is, however, no indication that anything of the kind is likely. With all the talk that the detectives working for the defense or in the interests of the defense have made regarding their ability to produce witnesses who would give testimony implicating others as well as proving the innocence of Hatie Le Blanc, they have made no move to have that evidence given to the grand jury.

It will be noted that Counsel Tufts and Morton have made no statement that they could implicate others, but merely that their client could not be convicted on the charge of murder, but would be able to show her innocence. Others, however, have asserted positively that they could bring evidence enough against certain persons to warrant them in trying to secure one or more indictments.

SPORTING NOTES

The Six-Day-Go-As-You-Please foot races seem to be a thing of the past, although one or two feeble attempts have been made in recent years to revive the sport. We no longer hear of men who have international reputations as six-day runners and the deeds of the old-timers seem destined to remain on record. Those who followed the races in Madison Square Garden New Kork, over a decade ago, will recall Jimmy Alberts, George Cartwright, Charley Rowell, Frank Hart, Patrick Fitzgerald, George Littlewood, George Noremac, Sullivan, the "Bangor Ghost"; Gus Guerero, Peter Hegeiman, Dan Herty, and several others. The present day followers of foot races want more speed and shorter distances.

HADLEY'S IDEA IS WEIRD

Yale President's Football Suggestion Would Make Game a Farce

President Hadley of Yale stands for the old game of football with one radical change that would really make the game a farce. He suggests:—

"If we want to eliminate mass play, we have it in our power to do so at any time by abolishing all gridiron lines and making one comprehensive rule that the ball change hands on every down unless the opponents have had a 'fair and equal chance' to get possession of it. This would abolish mass play, root and branch. The present rules have had some effect in this direction.

"But as long as the colleges want to reserve their strength for the final games they will tend to meet weak opponents with simple formations, and that, of course, means the massing of men."

Change the ball from one side to the other after each play, eh?

That would mean more scoreless games than ever and the game would degenerate to a pure kicking contest with no rushing whatever.

One team of them all in a season might have a wonderful player that would be able to dodge down the field for a touchdown through a broken field, but it is very doubtful if there would be even one dependable man of this stamp.

If there was he would be the greatest hero in the world and statues of him would be placed in all the parks. This "fair and equal chance" business would require a small army of diplomats to consider each play and a game might take weeks to play.

HORSE, DOG AND BOY MIX THINGS UP ON MAIN ST.

A small boy, a horse and a little brown dog created much amusement in the neighborhood of the city hall this morning, which the boy enjoyed as much as anybody till he saw the animal disappearing down the street at a gait that would have taken him to Boston in record time if he hadn't become tired and stopped. The boy—who was rather a small boy—was leading the horse—which was rather a tall horse—by a rope and was keeping himself and his charge warm by frequently prodding it out of the slow walk for which the animal seemed to have a preference.

The horse didn't make any objection at first, but when a stray cur began to snap at its heels, it seemed to think that trouble at both ends at the same time was rather more than a well conditioned horse could be expected to stand. The heels flew out and the head flew up. The boy at the business end of the rope sat down and the dog, having accomplished its purpose, winked the other eye, while the horse started toward Watertown. The sudden burst of speed did not endure, however, and though he scattered a group of children on the sidewalk by heading directly for them, he leaped against the first convenient fence and waited for his diminutive master to catch up with him.

KNITTING MILL BURNS.

A loss estimated between $15,000 and $20,000 was caused by a fire in the Harvard knitting mill in Wakefield discovered shortly after 11 o'clock last night and the all out was not sounded until the new year was an hour old.

The fire started in a box of waste on the third floor of the factory building over the engine room and burned into both the old and new sections of mill. Most of the damage was caused by water from the fire hose, and from the pipes of the sprinkling system, which started to operate when the heat of the fire became great.

FARMER NEAR DEATH BY WATER AND GAS IN BATHROOM

Timely Arrival of Physician Saves Young Englishman. Was Unconscious.

Overcome by the fumes of escaping gas that was pouring from a heater in a bath room whose jet had been turned by mistake, George Farmer, a young Englishman boarding at 186 Newton street, was saved from death by the timely assistance rendered him by Dr. Hennelley who was passing at the time and was hastily summoned by those who discovered the young man's plight.

Shortly after noon today, Farmer went into the bath room and filled the tubs. The room is heated as well as lighted by gas, and in some way when turning on the light Farmer turned the cock that supplied the tube of the heater as well. He did not notice the fumes, but crawled in to the tub and started to take his bath. In a few minutes the small room, which was not ventilated, filled with the escaping fluid.

Farmer noticed it at last and tried to struggle from the tub but felt back unconscious before he could get out of the tub. His head was submerged and had he not been discovered as he was, life would have been extinct in a few minutes. The fumes or the gas escaping through the keyhole attracted the attention of the Kinsman family, with whom he boarded. They called at the door and receiving no response, became convinced that something was wrong, and broke open the door.

Farmer was lifted from the tub, but the first efforts to restore him to consciousness were unavailing.

Some of the family started to call a physician and fortunately met Dr. Hennelley who was passing. He hastened to the house and after working over the man for an hour succeeded in bringing him back to life.

Farmer is a young Englishman who has been in this country only a short time. He is only 18 years old and works in the cotton mill where he is employed as a weaver. It is not believed that any serious effects will result from his strenuous experience.

RAILWAYS MAKE GOOD PROGRESS IN ST. CLEANING

Within the last two days the Middlesex and Boston Street railway has made considerable progress in clearing the snow from the streets along which its tracks run. The storm has been one of the hardest in years to handle, according to the officials of the company, and though a large extra force of men has been put to work, the task proceeds slowly. It is estimated that the storm has already cost the road $15,000 and $25,000 is a conservative figure at which to put the total by the time everything has been cleared up.

Main and Moody streets are in fair condition now, though on the upper part of Moody street something remains to be done. Prospect street is receiving the attention of the several gangs today. Exceptions are taken by the officials of the company to the statement of people on upper Main street that they have had the assistance of the city teams in clearing the snow thrown back from the car tracks.

That the railway sought the assistance of the city is not intimated by the informant of the News, but he still sticks to the assertion that there was snow taken from the side of Main street by city pungs which might have been employed to better advantage elsewhere in places where the railway company does not have tracks.

As a matter of fact the street railways claim that they are under no legal obligation to clear away the snow thrown up by their ploughs, since the excise tax law was passed. The railways pay a tax to the city because of the extra expense involved in clearing the streets beside the tracks and between them, and the opinion has been given that, notwithstanding any clause in the charter, they are not now legally obliged to clear up the snow.

The Middlesex and Boston companies, however, as well as other street railways in the State have not seen fit to take advantage of the point raised and have continued along the lines pursued before the excise law was passed.

CHARACTER PARTY IN CELEBRATION OF NEW YEAR'S EVE

The members of the Embroidery Club celebrated New Year's eve with a character party at the home of Mrs. Mattie Pike. Each of the sixteen members of the club was present, and each was masked and in costume.

There were ladies of 1880, roughriders and a witch and other characters. Surprises were many, much merriment being caused by confusion in identifications. The hostess received in a black evening dress.

The evening was devoted to games and music and at ten o'clock an excellent banquet was served. At each plate was a surprise bon-bon and a New Year's greeting, as follows:—

"Here's a cherry little rhyme.
Let us take 'the stitch in time.'
May we blend the colors true
'Till the glad New Year is through.
Happiness for thee and thine,
In the year that's after nine."

The old year was sung out w. "Auld Lang Syne."

The election of officers was deferred until the next meeting.

MURIEL ROACH LIES AT MT. FEAKE

Funeral services for Muriel May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ashley Roach, who died this week at the Waltham hospital after a long illness, were held yesterday at Beth Eden Baptist church. The edifice was filled with friends and schoolmates of the girl, who was a universal favorite among her companions. The floral tributes were numerous, among them being several designs from her classmates at school.

The service was conducted by Rev. William H. Dyas, pastor of the church and the Beth Eden choir sang Miss Roach's favorite songs, "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," "Nearer my God to Thee," and "Abide in Me." Interment was at Mt. Feake cemetery. Funeral arrangements were in charge of Coolidge and Strauch.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circular and testimonials.

Happy New Year!

The sooner combinations like the New York milk trust are squelched, the better.

"Can one steal a skunk?" asks a headline in the Boston Globe. Honestly, we have never tried.

The interstate package containing liquid refreshment enters on a new status today. Waltham, however, is not seriously affected. The pony expresses have no difficulty in keeping up the supply of purely domestic goods.

The best cold weather story so far comes from Weston. A veracious citizen avers that when his dog opened his jaws to bark they froze before the animal could bring them together. The man who tells this has a great future before him.

NO CREDIT FOR ANYONE

Neither the city nor the street railway has any reason to be proud of the manner in which it has handled the snow since the storm of last Saturday night. The feeble attempt made by the railway company to run its cars Sunday night might as well not have been made, for the public was in no way benefitted. The storm was a hard one to combat, there is no doubt, but it seems as if a little ginger properly applied might have resulted in having the tracks and the streets clear enough for general traffic sooner than they were.

Telegraphic dispatches from the South indicate that there is as much need of reform in the celebration of Christmas there as there is in the celebration of the Fourth of July in the North. The reason given for the excessive mortality of the past few days is the disturbances "that invariably accompany the observance of the Christmas season." The revelry and licenses allowed by custom do not seem to accord well with the true spirit of Christmas, and, while the practice is sanctioned by ancient usage abroad and at home, it would seem that it is about time to put a stop to it. The recklessness with which Americans enter into the celebration of any holiday is a national calamity. Southern nations can enjoy the extra liberties of carnival time without disastrous results, but when the Englishman, the Irishman or the American starts in to whoop things up there is usually blood shed. Perhaps the explanation is that the Latin races are satisfied to become "elevo" on light wines, while the others feel obliged to imbibe quantities of poor whiskey.

LET US HAVE A SANE FOURTH.

It is perhaps as well to point out again to the board of aldermen that convenes Monday that all over the country cities and towns are moving for a "sane" celebration of Fourth of July. Waltham has been one of the few cities in the Commonwealth where a great latitude in the matter of the observance of Independence Day has been allowed. There is no earthly reason why persons who wish to sleep should be awakened at midnight by exuberant and frequently overloaded hoodlums, when there is plenty of time during the hours of daylight for them to rid themselves of their superfluous energy. No one begrudges the small boy his celebration, but he can be made to restrict it to reasonable hours and to observe precautions for the preservation of life and property. Boston has this year taken the right course, and Waltham would do well to follow the example.

No Pipe Is Too Old

Smoking is a pleasure to you. But how about the comfort of others? Does it seem your pipe that is old enough to be retired on a pension, is strong enough to break rocks in the stone crusher? Perhaps you've got so used to its vileness that you don't realize your need of a new pipe. —Salem News.

One Way To Shake Her.

Arouses Bloodthiratiness.

No one who has read the poem of the late Edward J. Phelps upon Essex Junction, which touches a chord in the heart of every marooned traveler, will be surprised to hear that the Worcester airship was seen at the famed junction on Monday evening—that is to say, "its lurid lights athwart the sky was seen." A man left over at Essex Junction and feeling remote and unfriended of the world always sees red in that melancholy situation.—New York Sun.

WATERTOWN SELECTMEN HAVE MONEY TO SETTLE BILLS

The selectmen of Watertown held a brief session yesterday for the purpose of approving bills, something they haven't been able to do recently with any degree of comfort because of the lack of funds. But since the recent edict went forth that the tax collector should pitch in and round up the delinquents' money has come in with gratifying frequency.

ANTI-CIGARET LEAGUE

The Anti-cigaret League, whose board of management includes such men as Theophilus King, Robert M. Armstrong, Dr. John O. Blake, Mrs. Ole Bull, John L. Bates, Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark, Rev. Charles F. Dole, David A. Ellis, Thomas H. Fitzpatrick, Eugene N. Foss, Edwin Ginn, Richard C. Humphreys, Rev. Herbert Johnson, Prof. Elias H. Marston, Bishop Mallalieu, John A. Ryan, Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, Rev. Allen A. Stockdale, Rev. Benjamin F. Trueblood and Miss Helen A. Whittier are pushing the work.

Mrs. White, the secretary, has reached thousands of school children, and is in demand as a speaker. The literature of the league is directed against cigaret smoking among youths under 18 years of age. The league has made no general appeal as yet, preferring, first, to present a record which will commend it to the public and secure the co-operation and financial assistance of such as believe an ounce of prevention is worth a ton of cure. Literature can be had upon application to the league office, 204 Equitable building, Boston. The field of operation is limited now to Boston and vicinity, but will soon be extended over the State.

MORE UNIFORMITY IN COTTON PRICES

Cotton manufacturers from all over the country will converse Tuesday at Charlotte, N. C., for an important meeting on the general situation, with the object of arranging a more uniform schedule of prices. Business in cotton is slight at present, most of the purchases being for immediate use, but an increase in demand is expected with the beginning of the new year and the cessation of holiday shopping.

The call has been issued by the Southern Hard Spinners' association, and it is expected that fully 200 representatives of the leading cotton interests will be at the conference. The meeting is not limited to any special branch of the industry, but all workers of cotton are urged to be present.

The present price of cotton is 16 cents, and a rise in cost is expected. The supply as Memphis is large, but scarce at other distributing points.

2¼ POUNDS OF FOOD

Of Any Kind, Are Fully Digested By One Tablespoonful of Kodol.

Any kind of food, understand—not just some certain kinds. Kodol is right ly termed the "Perfect Digestant"—because it does digest any and all classes of food. Kodol does this because it contains, in liquid form, every one of Nature's digestive elements—therefore cannot help but digest food the way it does. Kodol as stated, digests all food—promptly and completely—and assures good health to the stomach. Come to think of it—Kodol does accomplish a great deal—if one gives it a chance. Some of the commonest and surest indications of more or less developed digestive trouble are these:

Bad breath, bad taste in the mouth, rising of sour, bitter fluid, gas and undigested particles of food into the mouth, tenderness and dull pain at "pit" of the stomach (sometimes relieved by eating), sensation of faintness, dizziness, and being "all gone," bloating of stomach and bowels, capricious and uncertain appetite, flabby coated tongue, uncomfortable "full" sensation after eating, "heartburn," lingering headaches, heart "fluttering" or palpitation, dull, sleepy, "logy" feeling, irregular action of the bowels, melancholy, gloomy forebodings, etc. Our guarantee: Get a dollar bottle of Kodol. If you are not benefited—the druggist will at once return your money. Don't hesitate; any druggist will sell you Kodol on these terms. The dollar bottle contains 2½ times as much as the 50c bottle. Kodol is prepared in the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.

ICE FOUR INCHES THICK ON WIRES

Tremendous Strain on Telephone Poles Seen Best at Neponset

Those people who fret because their telephones do not work properly, and who have been observant enough to look carefully at wires, as well as at the trees, realize by this time why they are bothered.

The great weight upon the poles may be shown by the record of one long-distance wire in Neponset, where the storm was as severe as anywhere. This wire, which may be taken as a fair example, measured four inches in diameter with its coating of snow and ice, and weighed three and one-half pounds to the foot.

Telegraph and telephone poles are ordinarily set 130 feet apart, and most of the poles carry from five to seven crosstrees, each bearing ten single wires. To obtain some idea therefore of the tremendous load sustained by the wires and poles it is but necessary to figure a bit.

A pole bearing seven crosstrees, and each crosstree carrying ten wires would make seventy wires on each pole, each wire being weighed down with three and a half pounds of snow and ice to the foot besides its own weight. With the poles 130 feet apart this little multiplication example would therefore show that from pole to pole 31,850 pounds of snow and ice was suspended, or only 150 pounds short of sixteen tons. Poles carrying five crosstrees and set 130 feet apart would support the additional weight of 22,750 pounds in a storm similar to that of Sunday, or 13 1-4 tons of snow and ice. These enormous weights would appear to be sufficient to snap almost any pole or wire, but their tensile strength may be judged when it is realized that the gale had a surface of nearly a foot of ice and snow to play against every running foot of wire.

NEXT WEEK AT THE AMERICAN MUSIC HALL

Comedy will be the key note of the bill at the American Music Hall next week. A laughing bill is always welcome and for that reason a real treat is in store for the patrons of this house. The big humorous hit will probably be scored by Byron & Langdon in their comedy sketch "The Dude Detective." It would be hard to imagine anything more everlastingly funny than Frank Byron's impersonation of the "Dude." He is one of the few men on the stage who can make such a character ludicrous without becoming disgusting. His typical song, "I Lost Another Chance to be a Hero" has long since taken its place among comedy classics. It is not exaggerating to say that Byron assisted by Miss Langdon make the funniest pair in vaudeville. The great troupe of English comedy pantomimists, Karno's Comedy Company will remain over another week presenting "A Night in the Slums of London." In addition to furnishing plenty of comedy this sketch throws much light on the "underworld" of London. It also furnishes ample opportunity for the dozen or more comedy acrobats to perform some hair-raising stunts. That great troupe of colored entertainers, Georgia Campers, will furnish more comedy. For sensational bicycle riders there is not a troupe on the stage today that surpass the wonderful Jackson family. The balance of the bill will be made up of acts fully up to the William Morris, the standard and the entertainment offered will not permit of a dull moment.

"Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm"

ARCHIE BOYD AS JERIMIAH COBB IN "REBECCA OF SUNNYBROOK FARM"

"Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," as dramatized by Charlotte Thompson and Kate Douglass Wiggin, which comes to the Tremont January 3rd., promises to prove one of the most interesting dramatic offering of the year, if not of the decade. The play combines the popular appeal of such time-honored successes as "The Old Homestead" and "Little Lord Fauntleroy," and the cleanliness of "Ben Hur." Rebecca, whose fortunes are followed from childhood to maidenhood, is a unique personality and one that lends itself readily to stage purposes. Miss Thompson has taken full advantage of this fact and the result is one of the most charming characters ever presented to the amusement-loving public. As the play abounds in quaint New England characters, so does the play. Simpson, the two maiden aunts, the kindly old stage-driver; Emma Jane, the "bosom friend" and the other simple Maine folk among whom Rebecca lives, are represented and under the skillful handling of the adapter, Charlotte Thompson, they become living, breathing characters of the type that the advent of the summer boarder in the small New England town has rendered almost extinct.

CREDO

In New England—
In the preeminence of her location as the gateway to Europe—
In the beauty and healthfulness of her hills and lakes—
In the undeveloped, unlimited power of her rivers, and the ocean commerce of her seaports—
In the variety and marvelous efficiency of her industries—
In the skill and inventive genius of her workmen, the public spirit of her business men, and the resulting prosperity of her people.

I BELIEVE

In New England's mission—
In the glory of her past and the greatness of her future—and I believe that the same spirit of the Boston Tea Party, of Lexington, and the Civil War—the spirit that lavishly gave its blood, brawn, brains, and money to the upbuilding of the country—still lives in New England's sons and daughters, and waits only the word to call all New England to the still greater things which are before us.

I BELIEVE

In the tremendous, transforming power of optimism; I believe that it is lack of faith which checks the development of individuals, associations, and sections—
That skepticism is the only thing which stands between New England and her great destiny—
And that when pessimism is transformed to optimism, New England will maintain her rightful place in the vanguard of industrial progress.

THEREFORE I AM RESOLVED

That I will avoid and help others to escape from the deadening, demoralizing rut of criticism, skepticism, and inertia—
That I will be a booster, not a knocker—
And that I will neglect no opportunity to show my faith in the future of New England and to labor unceasingly for its fulfilment.

WALDRON'S NEW CASINO THEATRE

Waldron's New Casino Theatre on Hanover Street near Tremont Row, Boston will open on Monday. It is hardly necessary at this time to describe this magnificent playhouse which will be devoted to high class musical burlesque.

Fred Irwin's Majestics is the attraction booked for the opening week Jan 3rd, and Manager Waldron could not have secured a stronger card. This is by far the most pretentious, grandest and most gorgeous company ever presented outside of the high priced theatres. The company comprises sixty people in entirety, among which will be found such well known performers as Gus Fay, Joe Hollander, Billy Smythe, Roy Cummings, Florence Bennett, Marie Hartmen, Helen Gladyings, Edith Shaw, Adele Meridith, Marie Revere, Jean Russell and Magda Dahl the well known operatic prima donna who was a revelation to the burlesque stage with this company last season. Mr. Joseph Hollander is responsible for the musical numbers. Many of them are entirely new and will not be heard with any other company this season. A large and efficient male and female chorus has been secured, the latter picked from the Broadway show girls.

Matinees will be given daily. The advance demand for seats insures crowded houses the opening week.

TO BURN TRAINING SHIP

Another of the old time warships of the United States navy will be relegated to the junk pile when the old sloop-of-war Enterprise will be burned for her metal within a few days. Dismantled and stripped of her interior furnishings, the Enterprise has been beached at Point of Pines to await the torch. The Enterprise was built in 1875, and for the past dozen years has been used as a schoolship for the Massachusetts nautical training commission. Last year she was replaced by the United States steamship Ranger and recently was sold to a junk dealer of Boston.

After January 1, 1910, this Company will reduce the PRICE OF GAS to 95 cents net per thousand cubic feet, this reduction being made possible by the consolidation of the Newton and Waltham Companies.

Customers are, therefore, respectfully requested to make special note of the date of the bill and the period covered in comparing same with previous bills, and also in order that advantage may be taken of the discount of 10 cents per thousand cubic feet, which we can allow only on payments made within fifteen days from the date of the bill.

After January, during which month the entire change of reading dates will be covered, customers will find that each month they will receive bills on or about the same date, and that each bill will invariably cover the preceding thirty days or so.

SKETCHES ARE PRESENTED AT CLUB MEETING

The Spencer Musical Club presented a number of light sketches to an audience of about one hundred persons in Armory hall last evening.

A regular meeting and social was held in the early part of the evening and the reports of the Opera and Finance Committees were read. The Opera Committee reported that the play, "Miss Bob White," would be presented February 16 and 17 in Endecott hall. This play, which will be under the direction of Mr. Hiram G. Tuttle promises to be a splendid success. The Finance Committee's report which was read showed that the Club is prospering and should be ranked with the best clubs of its kind. Following these reports a sketch entitled "The Swell Crackman" was presented with Aubrey Tabor "Scotch" and Arthur Murray as "Ame High Rank." The scene of the sketch was at a race track, and the many amusing situations were well handled.

Another sketch, "The Hay Rube" was produced, with James Currin as Uncle Dudley, Harry Tabor as the Irishman and Robert Murray as a negro. This sketch received much merited applause from the audience.

WOMAN'S CLUB HEARS DESCRIPTION OF ANCIENT CITY.

Palermo is trying to keep pace with Paris and is a city of much beauty as well as much destitution.

At Mt. Peale there is a wonderful cathedral in which over 70,000 feet of Mosaic tiling is used. Miss Penny said that the beauties of nature, the fruits, flowers, mountains and water were very fine. Miss Penny spoke in an interesting way of the royal family of Italy and how much was done by them for Sicily at the time of the earthquake.

At the next meeting of the club the class in Bible literature will have charge of the program and Rev. E. W. Whitney of this city will be the speaker.

CHILD HEIRESS RUNS OFF WITH MARRIED WAITER

Search for DeJanon Girl Prosecuted by Deserted Wife in New York—Suicide Letters as Blind.

New York, Jan. 1—While the private detectives and city police have not yet found Roberta E. DeJanon, the 15-year-old heiress who strangely disappeared from Philadelphia on Wednesday, they have discovered facts which lead them to believe that she came directly to this city, instead of committing suicide, as she had intimated in letters to her grandfather and to her father, Ferdinand DeJanon, of New York.

Robert Buist, grandfather of the missing girl, and with whom she lived at the Bellevue-Stratford in Philadelphia, asked the New York police to look for her and also for Frederick Cohen, a Bellevue-Stratford waiter, nearly 50 years old.

Mr. Buist, who on last Tuesday had signed papers of formal adoption making Roberta DeJanon the sole heir to his wealth, informed the New York police that Cohen and the girl boarded a train for New York.

Cohen's wife is now here leading the police through the various haunts of her husband when they lived here. She states that Cohen recently asked her if she would consent to a divorce for a money consideration and showed her a gold matchsafe which he said Miss DeJanon had given him.

COUNTESS CASSINI DROPS TITLE TO GO ON THE STAGE

Paris, Jan. 1—Countess Cassini, so popular in Washington society when her uncle, Count Cassini, was Russian ambassador there and she was the hostess of the embassy, announced positively today that she will go on the professional stage.

Countess Cassini will make her professional debut Jan. 11 in Salle Femina, one of the most fashionable concert halls in Paris. The concert will be arranged for her especially. She has engaged to make her appearance later at the opera.

The countess sang at many private concerts in Washington and led in fashionable gayeties and amateur theatricals.

On the stage she will assume the name of Marguerite Corani, her grandmother's maiden name. Countess Cassini has been living in Paris almost even since she left Washington.

She has been studying singing under several famous voice trainers.

ding the boy entrance. The report was accepted.

The annual report of the Division 3 committee stated that there had been but few changes in teachers in the primary and kindergarten departments and these were due to matrimonial causes, against which there is no defense. The attendance at the kindergartens is larger than ever, and if it continues there will be a demand for a kindergarten in the Bemis school.

This is the first time in several years that the first grade has shown a marked increase. All of the first grades except those at the Plympton and Bright schools are larger this fall than for several years. Two first grades at the Newhall will be required next year, and the higher grades must make room for them. This will mean an additional teacher somewhere along the line. The grounds of the Plympton school have been graded, tending to dispel the prejudice against the surroundings of the school. The records show that from the view point of health the school is one of the best in the city. Grading and improvements are needed at the Bemis and Lowell schools. It will not avail much to grade around the Lowell school until the grounds can be enclosed and prevent their further use as pathways in all directions. There are too many trees around the Banks and Newhall schools. It would be too bad to cut them down as it takes many years to grow such beautiful trees, and it would be better to have them transplanted to streets where the shade is needed.

The report was received and placed on file.

On report of Mr. French for the committee on accounts and estimates bills amounting to $9836.02 were approved. On recommendation of Mr. Hartwell the matter of an increase in salary for the truant officer was referred to the next board.

BETTER MANUAL TRAINING

Dr Temple made the annual report for the committee on manual training. The report referred at length to the industrial school which did not open this year. One reason was that the State failed to fulfill the promises made to share a portion of the expense. But the opening of the school was really contingent on the size of registration, and it was advertised that, if a class of 35 could be secured, the school would open. Only 22 registered their names. The committee communicated with the different manufacturers in this city to learn if the work done in the school was helpful to persons at work in shops. The committee received eight replies and much valuable information. The committee considers that the school is needed, but the equipment is not adequate enough to accomplish the best results. The committee recommended that no appropriation be asked for an industrial school, but that steps should be taken to better equip the manual training school for machine work. The grammar school boys get only one afternoon a week at manual training, and they should have more. The committee recommends that the school be opened several afternoons a week and that a teacher be engaged to further instruct the grammar school boys.

The heating for the manual training building is not adequate and the committee recommended that the building be heated independently of the High School building. This can be done by connecting with the small boiler which was installed to operate the ventilators and is not now used.

The report was received and placed on file.

Mr. Bent for the Committee on school houses recommended that the salary of John Gustafson of the Bright school be increased from $325 to $350, and that the salary of Sander Abramson of the Plympton and Banks schools be increased from $325 to $375. The report was accepted.

DRINKING CUPS

Mr. Thomas then brought up the matter of common drinking cups in the schools. He said that, as the matter is being pushed by boards of health, he considered it time for the School Board to look into the matter and see if a uniform system could not be adopted.

Superintendent Parkinson stated that he had been investigating the matter since it was called to the attention of the committee by the State Board of Health some time ago. He had since received a communication regarding the matter from the State inspector for this district. Mr. Parkinson said that the trouble is to find something that will give entire satisfaction. It is something in which the Board of Health, the Water Department, the Public Buildings Department and the School Board are all interested. At the recent teachers' convention the makers of the individual paraffin drinking cups had an exhibit. These cups are kept in a cabinet, but this is objectionable because there is a possibility of the cups catching the dust and also the exchange of cups by children. One teacher in our schools has been using straws with good results, but there must be some way to destroy the straws and avoid the possibility of their being used by more than one child.

The keeping of individual cups in the scholars' desks has been tried, but has been found to be unsatisfactory, because the cups collect the dust. Again, if one child is at the fountain drinking from his own cup, another child may come along and borrow it. The matter is one that must be seen to, but it is no easy matter to find the solution. The bubbling fountains are used in some places, but these offer the opportunity of placing the mouth directly in touch with the bulb.

Dr. Temple said that he used a good many paraffin cups but did not think them suitable for schools. He suggested an aluminum cup. Mr. Parkinson stated that, if the bubbling fountain system were adopted, the water department and public buildings department would be interested on account of the expense. After some further discussion it was voted that the superintendent be instructed to confer with the health and water officials and arrange a meeting with the School Board for the purpose of adopting some system that would be satisfactory.

It was voted to grant the use of the Assembly hall in the High School for the inauguration exercises of the city government next Monday.

Dr. Emery called attention to a matter that has been causing Miss Barnes, teacher of gymnastics for girls, considerable worry. Girls anxious to get on the basketball teams want to undertake vigorous gymnasium work and frequently do not tell the whole truth about their physical condition. It has been found that occasionally a girl has a weak heart, and then the teacher is blamed. Dr Emery said that it seemed advisable that there should be some system of examination of the heart by physicians. He suggested that it might be well to give pupils an opportunity to be examined by the family physician, and, failing to do this, the examination would be made under the direction of the school authorities. The matter was referred to the Committee on Medical Inspection.

Mayor Walker thanked all of the members for the courtesies extended during the year and wished all a happy New Year.

The board will meet for organization next Tuesday night.

LIFE OF CHRIST IN MOVING PICTURES

Tomorrow evening in Endecott hall a concert will be given by the members of St. Charles parish in aid of the building fund of the new church. This concert was scheduled for last Sunday but was postponed on account of the weather.

The life of Christ from the Nativity to the Crucifixion will be shown in moving pictures. All the well known Biblical scenes will be reproduced and as the films are true to life, the entertainment promises to be instructive as well as entertaining.

In addition to the pictures several appropriate selections will be rendered by well known local singers. The concert will be given in the afternoon for children and in the evening for adults. The price of admission in the afternoon is ten cents and in the evening 25 cents.

NEWSPAPERMAN SECRETARY TO GOVERNOR DRAPER

Governor Draper has chosen William A. Murphy of Boston to act as his private secretary to fill the position made vacant by the resignation of Frank L. Dean. "Billie" Murphy was born in Boston 11 1872, where he attended the public schools, graduating from Boston College in 1891. Pursuing his studies, he received the degree of M. A. from Georgetown University in 1892.

He entered the service of the City Press Association, and in 1896 became a member of the editorial staff of the Boston Globe and has since represented that paper at the State House.

The new secretary has been actively interested in politics, especially in the campaign against free silver, when he was one of those who toured the State speaking upon that issue. An intimate of both Gov. Guild and Gov. Greenhalge, he was appointed in 1907 by the former secretary of the Jamestown commission. He was also secretary of the 1906 commission to revise the railroad and street railway laws.

Present Secretary Dean will return to the active practice of law in Worcester, where is his home.

FORMER HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS DANCED THE OLD YEAR OUT

Annual Dance of Alumni Association Was One of Prominent Social Functions of the Season.

The annual dance of the Waltham High School Alumni Association was held last night in Maynard hall and was one of the most prominent social functions of the season. About 100 couples attended and danced the old year out and the new year in. Many attractive and elaborate gowns were worn by the ladies and the dance floor presented a brilliant scene Strauch's orchestra furnished excellent music. The matrons were Mrs. Allen Greenwood, Mrs. Arthur P. Teele and Mrs. H. F. Beal. The committee in charge consisted of Dr. Allen Greenwood, chairman, Robert Rutter, Miss Annie Halleran, Miss Marjorie Hartwell, Earl Eichler and Howard Peterson.

HALTS FLIGHT OF TERRIFIED GRAYS AT RISK OF LIFE

was dragged several yards but maintained his grasp on the bridle and brought the frightened animals to a halt within six inches of the tree.

The sleigh was occupied by Mrs. Warren Ellsworth of Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, her daughter and four children. The driver was on the front seat with two of the youngsters when a passing electric car started the horses, a pair of spirited grays. The driver was bringing them well under control, when one of the children alarmed at a sudden lurch of the sleigh, grasped his arm, causing him to jerk the horses suddenly to one side and to lose his grip on one of the reins.

In a second the horses had started on a wild flight down the street. The driver was helpless though he endeavored to reach for the dangling rein across the dashboard of the sleigh. Every time he tried to use the single rein that he held in his hand he caused the horses to swerve toward the side of the street, where fortunately much of the drifting snow had been leveled.

The milk team driven by Corrigan was standing by the side of the street, out of the path of the advancing horses. Corrigan, who was beside his team, saw that a catastrophe was imminent and without waiting to turn his own team out of the way, dashed back and sprang for the bridle of the horse nearest him. The speed at which the animals were going threw him off his feet, but he retained his hold and though dragged through the rough snow and ice, tugged away till smoking and panting, the horses stopped.

No one in the sleigh was injured. Mrs. Ellsworth retained her presence of mind and tried to quiet the fears of her young companions. She had considerable difficulty in preventing one of the children from leaping from the sleigh.

Corrigan's hands were somewhat scraped by the ornaments on the horses bridles and there were several inches of skin taken from his knee, but he was otherwise uninjured.

Orrine Cured Him of DRUNKENNESS

Her Husband Now Spends His Evenings at Home.

She bought Orrine from the druggist in her home town—she bought it after reading the Orrine Free Booklet. In the Booklet she read of the wonderful cures of drunkenness which were accomplished by the aid of Orrine. On page ten of the Booklet she read the liberal guarantee to refund all money paid for Orrine if it failed to effect a cure. After reading the Booklet she became convinced that Orrine was a remedy of unusual merit. She decided to purchase it and cure her husband of drunkenness. Orrine cured him. Now she is a happy wife in a happy home. Orrine helped to purchase the home. Read the following letter from Walter K. Schmidt Co., 31 Canal St., Grand Rapids, Mich.

"For a number of years we have been agents for Orrine. During that time we have had occasion to be convinced, beyond a doubt, that Orrine is a reputable remedy, worthy of recommendation. One of the many cases coming to our attention, a mechanic earning $22.50 per week, who had not taken a full pay envelope home for over five years, was induced to try Orrine, a complete cure being the result. The man became worth more to his firm, receiving an advance in pay, and has purchased a home. The house stands there showing the merits of Orrine. We can not help but feel that we were most fortunate when we secured the agency for this reliable liquor cure."

Orrine is prepared in two forms. No. 1, a powder, absolutely tasteless odorless, given secretly in food or drink. Orrine No. 2, in pill form, for those who wish to cure themselves. Orrine costs only $1 a box. Full guarantee is in each box. Write for Orrine Booklet (mailed in plain sealed envelope) to Orrine Co., 1000 Orrine Building, Washington, D. C. Orrine is for sale in this city by Kent & Lyon Co.

Know Orrine is a reliable and efficacious remedy for drunkenness and they will not offer you a substitute.

WANT EX-GOV. GUILD TO COME TO WASHINGTON

Popular There.—His Election to Congress Would be Welcomed

Ex-Governor Guild of Massachusetts has many admirers all over the land and not a few inquiries are heard if he is going to come to Congress now that he is no longer governor, says John Lorence in his Washington Correspondence in the Boston Advertiser. It is held that the house is the place for him, and that he would have there great room in which to display him talents and would quickly rise to a commanding figure not only there but in the nation, and even more so than he now is. His popularity in the West is unquestioned.

He has magnificent personal presence, and that should at once attract notice in the house. He is delightful socially and a keen wit to boot, so that he should easily make his way among the members. His talents would impress themselves on legislation so that he should become a power to be reckoned with in the house. Moreover, he has progressive ideas and his views on the tariff would command a large following which would be inclined to hail him as leader. He is eloquent. As an after-dinner speaker or a speaker at other functions he would be in demand from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast. His prestige and fame require no building up. It is already established. Indeed it is believed he would gain in the house in one year a place that it has required a dozen years for some statesmen to attain.

So run the views, and there is hope here that somehow Curtis Guild jr. may be persuaded to stand for congress from the Back Bay district of Boston. His election, it is believed, would follow.

The Pernin System of Shorthand

The young man or young woman who contemplates taking a course of study in a business school should exercise judgment in making choice of a school to attend. There are many to choose from,—(all of them good, in a greater or less degree) but they vary, each from the others, in many points.

It is to be assumed that the prospective student is not about to take a business course for the fun of doing so, but for the benefits to be obtained,—such as a practical knowledge of business methods, a knowledge of bookkeeping, shorthand, typewriting, etc., which would enable one to secure a position in some business house and satisfactorily perform the duties belonging to that position and to receive for such work a good salary. But few young people who have such an object in view have much money to throw away. They necessarily wish to secure the desired results,—get through study and get to work—as soon as possible, and at the least expense. A cheap article is not always the best, nor is that which costs the most always the best. That school is the best which will give the student the best training for the least money, and in the least time

The Pernin School of Business, Inc., stands alone in meeting these requirements. Its courses are full and complete, and are taught by teachers who are experts in their several lines. The distinctive feature of the school is the system of shorthand taught—the Pernin, which has earned for itself the reputation of being the most quickly learned, the most rapidly written, and the most easily read of any system of shorthand taught in any school.

To those who have needed 10 to 15 months to learn shorthand in the schools teaching the Pitmanic systems, it seems almost impossible that a student can learn the Pernin in the short space of six months; but while we will not promise that every student can learn Pernin shorthand in six months, it is a fact that, for every one who requires more than six months, fifty require less than six months—many only four months,—and they are as fully qualified, able to take as good positions and obtain as good salaries, as the graduates of those schools which make a point of keeping students from 10 to 15 months. The same is true about everything taught in this school. Expert, well trained teachers are in charge of every department and, with able assistance, no student is kept back for need of help.

The graduates of this school are filling the best positions, and receiving the highest salaries paid in office positions n Boston. Wherever you find a Pernin writer, you will find one who excels, and this fact is so well known that many writers of other systems advise their friends to learn Pernin shorthand.

The advantage a student has in choosing his school, is seen by the following true story:

In the early part of January, 1907, four young ladies of practically equal abilities began the study of shorthand and typewriting—two studying Pernin, and two studying Pitmanic system, in less than five months the two who studied Pernin shorthand had finished it and went to work, one for $9.00 and the other for $10 per week. The other two studied all that year, and till some time in May 1908, about a year from the time the Pernin students took positions. These Pernin writers had earned about $500 each at the time the others were ready to go to work, after paying tuition and stationery bills for nearly a year, or almost $200—making the Pernin writers $700 ahead

This is a fair comparison of the merits of Pernin shorthand when learned by competent teachers.

The student who elects to take a course in the Pernin School of Business, Inc., will find these points of superiority:

1st The school teaches the Pernin system of shorthand, which saves six months' time.

2nd This school teaches bookkeeping as books are kept by all modern business men, using the safeguard and voucher systems.

3rd This school makes the incidental expenses as low as possible—fifteen dollars being the cost of all necessary supplies for complete courses in bookkeeping or shorthand, with all kindred studies.

4th This school employes the best teachers to be found, without respect to salaries.

5th This school has the finest location in Boston, occupying the entire sixth floor of a new fire-proof building, situated at 653-659 Washington street; is directly over the new tunnel stations, going both North and South, and three minutes' walk from the Boylston subway station, and South terminal station.

6th This school will give every student credit for what she or he has learned in other schools. No students will be obliged to again do work already done, as an excuse for keeping them a few months longer in the school.

7th This school makes every effort to assist the student in completing the courses in the shortest possible time, and to make the cost of the courses as small as possible.

8th This school gives individual instruction. Other schools may promise it, but this school actually gives it.

9th The student completing either or all of the courses at the Pernin school, will find a ready demand for his or her services, for business men have learned that young men and young women trained here have a practical knowledge of the work they are called on to do.

10th Parents who send their sons and daughters to this school will save from $100 to $200 in expenses and from six to ten months in time, in which from $250 to $500 can be earned.

LEGISLATURE WILL RECONVENE NEXT WEDNESDAY

The great and general court of Massachusetts will reconvene Wednesday, at 11 a. m., the house being called to order by Samuel H. Boutwell of Andover, the oldest senior member-elect present, and the senate by D. D. Mahoney of Holyoke.

Mr. Boutwell served in the house in 1874; Mahoney is re-elected for his fifth consecutive term.

Theoretically, the general court is a continuous body.

Prayer will be offered in the upper branch by Rt. Rev. T. D. Beaven, Roman Catholic bishop of Springfield, and in the lower branch by Rep. Boutwell's minister.

It is expected that Speaker Walker and Pres. Treadway will again take time by the forelock and announce the committees on the first day of the sessions. That was what they did last year, breaking all records for expedition. Some years the committees had not been announced till the first Monday, or later, and never before the first Friday.

Announcing of committees and drawing of seats will complete the business of Wednesday, after the usual swearing in.

Thursday is inauguration day, and Gov. Draper's second inaugural address, delivered before both branches of the legislature, will be the feature. It is reported that it will be a crisp business-like document, even briefer than that of last year.

Thomas F. Pedrick of Lynn, at present doorkeeper of the house, will probably make his first appearance as sergeant-at-arms on Thursday. It is expected that the senate republican caucus will nominate him Tuesday night, and the house republicans Wednesday morning, to succeed Capt. Remington, who retires on half-pay—half of $3500.

This will be the only change in official life at the State House. Speaker Walker, President Treadway, Chaplain Waldron of the house, Chaplain Horton of the senate, Charles Kimball and Coolidge, being all in line for re-election.

AUTOS MUST HAVE NEW TAGS TODAY

The new State motor law went into effect, and on and after this date Massachusetts autoists will have to attach new numbers to their cars and pay an increased registration fee. The fact that the total registration under the new law has already passed the 2000 mark indicates that many people who formerly stored their machines during the winter months, this year will be seen upon the highways.

During the last week applications have been received on the average of over 100 a day, and the commission has already received $25,000 in fees for registering cars and renewals of licenses.

The new law will not make much difference to the careful driver, but the reckless operator will find himself in difficulty, and he will be unable to escape the clutches of law as easily as he has in the past. The minimum fines have been increased and those who delight in cutting records on the highways will find it expensive.

Violations of the new automobile law will be made punishable for first offence, by a fine of not less than $10 nor more than $25; for second offence not less than $25 nor more than $50; and for third offence not less than $50 nor more than $100.

Several other statutes, enacted by the Legislature enter into effect today with the new year, among them the 56-hour law, a new statute relative to the assumption of risk by employes and the plan or giving to the harbor and land commission $100,000 annually for harbor improvements.

The 56-hour law provides, in effect, that no child under the age of 18, and no women shall be employed in a manufacturing or mechanical establishment for more than 56 hours in any single week.

Employes injured in the discharge of their duties will hereafter be given an additional right of action if a defect in machinery is reported and is not remedied within a reasonable time.

Cities and towns in the metropolitan district must now metre each year 5 per cent. of their water installations under penalty of not less than $20 nor more than $100 for each day during which such violation of the act continues.

In other statutes taking effect today it is provided that April 1 instead of May 1 shall be the date for the assessment of taxes; that deposits in the savings departments of trust companies shall be subject to a tax in the year 1910, of one-eighth of 1 per cent., in the year 1911 of one quarter of 1 per cent., and in the year 1912 three-eighths of 1 per cent.

NEW YEAR COMES IN WITH LOWEST TEMPERATURE YET

Glass Registered 11 Below in Early Morning Hours--Weather Bureau Discredited.

There is a deep and uncomfortable meaning in the time-honored joke that this is the coldest day of the year. "The back bone of the cold wave is broken," according to mendacious reports from the weather bureau, but in the process of breaking it scattered frigidity over Greater Boston to an extent that was not anticipated by those who read last night's papers and were looking forward to opening 1910 with some degree of comfort.

Instead there were several degrees of frost. After midnight the mercury started on its downward path and slid till it reached the lowest point it has attained this season. The glass yesterday was considerably higher than it had been for a day or two, but it was the pride that went before a fall. Belated celebrators who had been watching glasses all the evening didn't notice it, but earnest and sober people were made painfully aware that it was cold, while the ice man and the coal man chortled with glee.

Waltham was hit considerably harder than Boston. The thermometer at the pumping station registered two below at seven o'clock and had only risen one degree an hour later. At the car barns of the Middlesex and Boston street railway it was 11 below at five o'clock and hadn't come up to the zero point at eight. Thermometers all over the city ranged from two to ten below till long after the sun had reached a position in the heavens where it might be supposed to give out considerable heat.

What was left of Forecaster Smith's reputation was broken to atoms, frozen and chopped off, for a steadily rising temperature was predicted for today, and is promised for tomorrow, but while there was a slight relief toward noon there does not seem to be any immediate prospect of humming birds.

Considerable suffering was entailed by the sudden drop. The man whose means do not permit him to fill the coal bin and the wood box except a little at a time, was unprepared and there were a good many hurry calls on the charity department this morning. As far as can be ascertained there were no cases in Waltham where death or serious illness ensued as the direct result of the cold wave.

Milk dealers were seriously hampered. Nearly all the pumps in Lincoln were frozen, causing considerable delay in the delivery of the matutinal lactage. Water pipes all over Waltham were affected, but while the department has plenty to keep the few permanent men busy, there have been none of the destructive breaks which in former years have bothered it.

NOW is the time to have your Fall and Winter Clothing Dyed, Pressed and Cleaned and made ready for the cold weather.

THE BROKEN BOTTLE

By Kate Jordan

THERE it was, that little green bottle, shaped something like the pickle jar at home, bits of light-colored clay sticking to it, as if it had just been dug up in the back yard, yet it stood on a small pedestal on Mrs. Woods's drawing-room mantelpiece. Susy had often wondered why it had been singled out for this honor. To-day, having leisure and opportunity, she wondered more than ever.

She had come to play "house" with Emmy Woods, but had found her in the hands of the visiting seamstress. After an unpleasant three-quarters-of-an-hour, Mrs. Woods had politely dismissed Susy, telling her not to bang the street door after her, and the visitor had departed with a feeling of deep resentment.

With a dull Saturday afternoon stretching in grayness before her, Susy had crawled listlessly down the stairs, letting her arm slide along the smooth mahogany banister, until she had paused just before the open drawing-room door. It was then, as she stood peering into the shaded, hushed place, that the little green bottle had begun to interest her curiously.

Why should it be up there, enthroned on a pedestal? It seemed to her irritatingly "stuck up," as if it sneered down on the Dresden shepherd and his lass, and on the stuffed canary under a glass cover that kept looking up at it most worshipfully, as if it wanted to chirp.

"Cast but one glance on thine humble servant, O King!"

It was odd, too, that Mrs. Woods should put the bottle there for every one to look at, and never have it cleaned. Susy remembered that the first time she had seen it—oh, a very long time ago, maybe as long as six months—it had been very dirty, and dirty it had remained. The result of her reflections was a criticism of Mrs. Woods as a housekeeper, and a decision to use her own pent-up surplus activity in cleaning the impudent-looking bottle.

To this end she cautiously rolled over to the mantelpiece a rep-covered armchair. Very guardedly, a fixed, nervous smile of anticipation on her face, Susy took the bottle from its high place and, lifting the point of her apron, prepared to give it a thorough brushing. But her uneasy feet had pressed the armchair backward and she lost her balance. She fell against the mantelpiece and her clasp loosened on the bottle. With a dainty, tinkling crash it broke into splinters.

The suddenness of the disaster hypnotized her into inaction, and for a moment she could only stare at the prismatic hued wreck. With realization of her mischief, the thought of the wrath in Mrs. Woods's cold eyes made her cringe. She pushed the chair back to its place, stole from the room, and the previous direction to "leave the house quietly" was obeyed with fanatical exactness. No mouse ever crept out on a midnight reconnoitering expedition with more silken stealth than did Susy Gilvarry from the Woods home.

What was to be done? She must tell her mother, of course, and her mother would go and tell Mrs. Woods, making polite apologies for her child, after the manner of the Big People; and Mrs. Woods, no matter how furious she might be inside would also, following the same law, smile and say it did not matter in the least and that Mrs. Gilvarry must not think of such a trifle again.

Susy was, however, trembling and very awed when she reached her own home but a few doors away. Ellen admitted her, her expression sulky because her cheek was swollen.

"Oh, it's you, Miss Susy, is it?" she grumbled. "You forgot to wipe your feet again, too. How often will Peter have to wash the steps, I'd like to know?"

Susy did not seem to hear. With a preoccupied expression she began climbing energetically to her mother's room. It was empty. Neither was Margaret, the nurse, in the sewing-room, stitching as usual. There was no trace of her sister Genevieve, whom she had left in the back yard digging with her new spade. The library was vacant, too. The whole house was depressingly still.

A sense of personal injury began to inflate Susy, particularly when she realized that this being Saturday afternoon her father had left his office early—in fact, that the smell of his after-luncheon cigar was still in the library, though he himself had vanished. Where were they all? Why was she left alone in the world, and at a time when she badly needed an arm around her, a breast to shiver up against as she confessed her fault?

She hurried to the kitchen, but even cook, who generally welcomed her with a cooky, had other interests to-day; her son was visiting her, and cook was talking to him in a happy, excited way, with the big green butterfly bow which she reserved for great occasions plastered on her breast. Ellen was cleaning silver in the laundry, her cheek now wrapped in a small shawl.

"Where is everybody, Ellen?" Susy asked in an injured voice.

"Out," said Ellen thickly.

"But where?"

"Drivin'."

Time was needed for the bitterness born of this reply to have its full effect.

"Mama and papa took Genevieve—and didn't take me?"

"Don't bother me, Miss Susy," said Ellen. "Me face is ready to walk off me with the pain, an' me feet are in me knees."

"Driving?" Susy faltered. "But mama knew I was at Emmy Woods's. Maybe they drove there after I left," she continued in miserable yet hopeful speculation. "Perhaps they'll come back for me. I'll put on my Roman sash to be ready."

"They won't, then!" said Ellen, impatience and suffering making her brutally honest. "I'm thinkin' your mama said you might go into Mrs. Woods's, so they could take Miss Genevieve without you raisin' your usual ructions."

Susy stared at her. The rising tears retreated before a cold, dead feeling that in some subtle way was an awakening to a new, humiliating point of view.

"Sure they'll take you—next time," said Ellen carelessly.

Susy had too much pride to weep before the servants. She went back upstairs a different child from the penitent who had descended, yearning for her mother. She felt numb and a little sick, but there was a brassy flare in her brain that made her know things never understood before during all the eight years of her life.

She selected the most uncomfortable place she could find—the hard, ropey mat by the back hall door, under which the cold air crept—and there, hugging her knees, she gave herself over to her misery. She was not loved. She was not wanted. Her parents were gone, bearing Genevieve to glory and pleasure, the servants were cross; but, worst of all, Her Own Mother had suggested the visit to Emmy, to have her, the undesired and unloved child, well out of the way!

She wept as long as the tears would come. By the time her eyes were dry and burning she was hardened—a little Ishmael. If nobody loved her, why should she love any one? It was very evident that if she died no one would care. Even the thought that they would all be stricken with remorse as they gazed at her in her flower-trimmed coffin had cold comfort in it.

She began to look for the reasons which went to the making of this situation. Why did her parents love Genevieve better than they loved her? Why was she not adored as Emmy Woods was adored by her mother? Thinking of Emmy made her remember the green bottle, and that she had been seeking a sympathetic confessor to tell of its ruin when the knowledge of her unloved condition had come upon her. She now wove the thought of this disaster into the questions prompted by her sense of injury.

If Emmy had broken the bottle, Emmy, the pampered pet, who was loved and guarded both by her mother and her German governess—would Emmy be scolded? No.

If Genevieve had broken it—Genevieve, aged five, whom everybody kept kissing—would she be punished? No.

If her brother Bob had broken it—Bob, aged eleven, off at a boarding-school, whose homecomings were feasts, for whom the best of everything was kept—would he be punished? Hardly—nothing to speak of, certainly. He would hear a few regretful words and be dispatched to apologize to Mrs. Woods.

This was injustice, and Susy recognized it as such. She began to understand it in her own way: Emmy was an Only Child. Genevieve was a Youngest Child. Her brother Bob was an Eldest Child. But she had been placed by unkind fate in the most unattractive position possible—the war in the middle. She began to think that the fairy stories were wrong and that Cinderella must have been a Middle one. Well, what would happen to a Middle one when she, quite by accident, broke a green bottle? She would be taken sadly by her mother to a quiet library where her father would sit sternly waiting, and after a lot of talk about how awful she was, and what a disappointment to her parents, various punishments that she did not care to dwell upon, even in fancy, would be arranged for her.

At this point the instinct of self-defense brought her to a decision:

"If I say nothing about the bottle no one will know."

Her face brightened. Why not? Why confess and be punished?—she, the Cinderella, the unloved Middle Child? Mrs. Woods would fancy that Emmy had broken the bottle. Very well, let Emmy who had everything made pleasant for her, bear the blame. She, Susy Gilvarry, had trouble enough in her dark life without bothering about a nasty little bottle that must have been very cheap to break so easily. So, from a stumbling sinner she became an exultant one. When she saw Genevieve come back from her drive with a balloon, she almost did not mind, she was so wickedly happy in having put the onus of her own fault upon an Only Child. Her eyes were red, but a silence eloquent of dark things wrapped her about.

"Susy, dear," her mother asked, "what's the matter?" and she drew her to her, plaiting her hair afresh after the tender, busy manner of mothers. "Were you disappointed because you weren't taken driving to-day? I'm sorry, but there wasn't room for you in the carriage."

Susy wriggled from her. Words! Words! Words!

"On Saturday week, if it's fine, you shall come and Genevieve shall stay at home. Genevieve won't mind, will you—my sweet?"

Genevieve paused in her balloon-flying. She looked dubious.

"What would I do while Susy went away in the hansom?" she asked cautiously.

"Why, Margaret could take you to Central Park to see the lions."

"Oh, then I wouldn't care if Susy went," cried Genevieve.

"You dear, generous, sweet mite!" and Mrs. Gilvarry caught her and smothered her with kisses.

Susy had retreated to a corner, and her set mouth, her folded arms, were not unlike those of the exiled Napoleon's in the famous painting. The little scene had borne out her previous logic only too well. Of course when she was taken driving, something equally charming was provided for the Youngest Child. She went to bed that night a rebel, ripe soil for more deception if by it she could champion the Cause of the great army of unappreciated Middle ones.

But as is usual when one is eight, all this was almost entirely forgotten long before four days had passed. So many new and really pleasant things had happened, that dark reflections had been crowded out. On Tuesday, she had won praise in school for her realistic rendition of "The Charge of the Light Brigade," and she liked to remember the hush after she had cried in her best chest tones:

"Theirs but to do and die—
Noble six hundred."

Also a new girl had said it was a shame to plait such curly hair as Susy had, and this had led to friendship, sealed and signed with many marshmellow drops, and other confections so dear to the childish heart. It was not strange, therefore, that on Thursday, when Susy reached home from school, she was genuinely light-hearted, and was about to run upstairs to show Genevieve the pinwheel which the new girl had given her when Mrs. Woods's drawling, disconsented voice floated to her through the open parlor door:

"She broke it, my dear Mrs. Gilvarry, beyond a doubt. I am simply distracted. What shall I say to Uncle Roger when he comes back from Morocco? That Aztec bottle was as the apple of his eye. Every scrap of the lava adhering to it was dear to him. It was one of the specimens excavated during his first expedition to Yucatan, fifteen years ago, when he went for the Government."

Susy had come to a stand against the newel post of the stairs. Who was the she?—Emmy—or herself? And who did lava and Aztec and all the other strange words mean?

"I'm so sorry," Susy heard her mother say. "A lie to shield herself is the last thing of which I could have believed Fräulein capable."

The pinwheel fell from Susy's fingers, and a smothering sensation filled her throat and head. When at length she crept upstairs, not to Genevieve, but to the back hall window-seat behind the heavy rep curtains, she was cold and dismayed.

HE LIFTED HER IN A GENTLE, STRONG WAY

The whole story was clear to her. Emmy's German governess had been accused of breaking the green bottle, and it was not a green bottle at all, but something very wonderful and valuable, that Emmy's old great-uncle with the copper-colored face had dug up somewhere and had given only as a loan to Mrs. Woods. Fräulein had always dusted the parlor ornaments and no one else ever touched the bottle. When Mrs. Woods found the fragments of the bottle swept into a corner behind the stuffed canary she had gone to Fräulein, who had burst into tears, but who insisted that she had not broken the bottle. And now an awful thing was going to happen: after four years of service as nursery-governess to Emmy, Fräulein was leaving in rage at being considered untruthful; only love for her charge would make her remain until the end of her month, two weeks off.

Oh, how fully Susy now understood all! Now she knew why the bottle had seemed dirty, and why it had been elected to a place of honor. Now she knew that Emmy, who was aware of its value, would not have touched it for the world. Now she knew that there was but one right thing to do—go at once to Mrs. Woods and tell the truth. But this confession had in its train such mysterious and perhaps painful consequences to herself that the thought made her actually ill. She convinced herself that, had the green bottle been in reality the common thing it had seemed, she would have hurried down and surrendered herself. But the fact that it was an incomprehensible treasure brought from a strange land by Emmy's great-uncle, frightened her. This Uncle Roger was the most forbidding person Susy had ever seen—old, so old!—with snow-white hair and face all brown and wrinkled. She had always feared him, and now recalled how on a certain day, when she and Emmy were playing near his chair, he had cried in a snapping voice:

"Oh, this drivel about the delight to be found in children! Confounded little pests, they drive me frantic! King Herod's example might be followed occasionally with good results."

No—she could not tell—she could not—she could not! So began her double life.

During several days following, she had to listen to much about the green bottle and Fräulein. Her mother and father spoke of the matter frequently. In Susy's heart the consciousness of her guilt deepened hourly. She felt sorry for Fräulein, but not sorry enough to confess, for she excused herself by saying that she had known how precious the bottle was, she would not have touched it.

But an experience that left its mark upon her happened on Wednesday afternoon. This was a chance meeting with Emmy and Fräulein in Washington Square. Fräulein was sitting quietly beside Emmy, who seemed to have no heart to play. How sad she was, poor Fräulein! How she kept patting Emmy's mitten while her eyes looked far away! But oh, the unguessed coals of fire, when Fräulein had beckoned to her—to Her, the secret enemy—and tried to push into the pockets of her coat more than a dozen peanuts quite hot. Without speaking Susy refused this gift. She pushed the peanuts back into Fräulein's lap and walked very quickly away, her vision dimmed.

This occurrence destroyed her arguments for self-excuse and left her conscience smarting. Her guilt began to haunt her, as with an unlistening ear she sat among people at home and at school. A persistent ache that ticked like a clock somewhere inside of her, gave her no peace, and a little, little voice kept speaking to her after this fashion:

"Poor Fräulein was always good to you, Susy. How lovely she was when she took you and Emma to Central Park. She never bothered, didn't keep saying, 'Don't do that' and 'Come here.' Then that day when she took you all the way to the Battery on the elevated train! And have you forgotten the Eden Musée, and the lovely tea she gave you afterward?"

But though tormented in this way, Susy persisted in her deception and guarded her secret. Unhappy, with lips sealed, she mingled with the innocent and light-hearted.

Friday was story-telling day at school, a day usually much loved by her, but this week she was not in a mood to enjoy anything. She scarcely listened, until a phrase from an old legend read aloud by her teacher aroused her. This was about a young prince, who though beautiful to look upon, had done many and secret dark deeds. One blustery midnight, when his horse had almost plunged him over a cliff, a girl as fair as an angel had risen in the road and by a magic word had quieted the animal! Through love for her the regeneration of the wicked prince was begun, but he didnot feel himself worthy even to touch her hand until by renunciation and self-chastisement during a long, lonely year in his sea-encircled castle he had purged his soul of sin.

Susy asked many questions about the self-immolation of the prince by which he was purified and made happy. After reflection the matter was summed up to her intelligence in one fact: that by doing none of the things one liked, and only doing those which one could not possibly care about, one might feel happy and good again. She could not live on bitter herbs as the prince had done; she was afraid to cut off her hair; she had no damp dungeon to sit in; she had never seen a hair shirt, and had no money to go shopping for one. However, she would do what she could. By luncheon the next day she had quite made up her mind.

Her aversion to soft-boiled eggs as "messy" was a family tradition. On this day there were soft-eggs for Genevieve, but a big, baked potato with plenty of butter, pepper and salt had been prepared for Susy. She had never loved this flaky, steaming dainty more than as she pushed it from her, and said in a trembling voice:

"I want some soft eggs, please."

Mrs. Gilvarry, who had listened mystified, shook her head.

"I want them soft," Susy insisted. "The messy kind, like Genevieve's."

"What has happened to Susy, do you suppose?" Mrs. Gilvarry asked Margaret later.

"Miss Susy's had a strange look for days, ma'am," Margaret answered. "She's been going about on her toes as if she stepped on egg-shells, jumping whenever she's spoken to."

"I'll give her some rhubarb to-morrow," said Mrs. Gilvarry.

The mystery grew, when in the morning Susy said that she was glad she had to take the medicine. She also went smiling to the fortnightly hair-washing, nor did she even groan under the rinsing shower. On Saturday, when the promised drive was arranged, she amazed her parents by asking, sweetly, that Genevieve be taken in her stead, and suggesting that she herself help Margaret pull out bastings. Her mother, alarmed, began to think of those angelic children who always died young.

Besides this self-chastisement, Susy had been trying to smooth Fräulein's life. Since the day in Washington Square she had avoided the Woods house, but Genevieve as her ambassador had gone "bearing gifts" to Fräulein—a satin pincushion, a Mother Goose calendar, and a thick triangle of hot gingerbread, which Susy would have liked herself. Oh, she would do anything to make Fräulein happy—anything, except confess!

The terrible moment came, however, when she had to face the truth: None of these sacrifices brought peace to her soul. Twice in dreams she had seen the green bottle grown into an awful, living thing, with legs like a beetle and eyes like a frog as it danced before her. After awakening from this terror in the stillness of the house the little, little voice was heard so clearly:

"The days are going fast. You can't hold them back—no one can hold them back. Poor Fräulein will soon be gone. It will be too late then, Susy! It will be too late! Can you let her go away into the wide, wide world punished for you? Can you do this, Susy?"

Late on the next Thursday afternoon, Fräulein brought Emmy to call.

"Genevieve told you how I thought your presents lovely, Susy?" Fräulein asked affectionately. "You were so good to think of Fräulein."

Susy did not reply. She could only stare. The girl's face, so thin and grave, no longer broad and laughing, was a real torture to her.

"But why you don't come over to play any more with Emmy, dear Susy? Fräulein will soon be gone. Only till Friday am I here, liebchen. Then poor Fräulein goes far away."

Those words made Emmy whimper wildly. On Susy they acted like a lash, and she ran up the stairs, her face frightened.

By the time Susy reached the window-seat and had crept behind the curtains, she knew. As she laid her worn, little face on her knees, she knew. Happiness was not to be found again by any trick or evasion. Confession alone could silence that little, little voice.

Though harder to confess now than at first, she must do it. How? When? Should she go to her mother, or her father, to Mrs. Woods or to Fräulein? But she shrank from facing any of them. Selecting as a punishment the person whom she most dreaded, she decided to write to Mrs. Woods.

The opportunity came when her father and mother were dressing for the theater. She stole into the library, and climbed into the leather chair at the library desk. Her heart was full and she was cold from nervousness as she began in round, shaded letters:

"Dear Mrs. Woods I hope you are well and all your family. I am not so very well. I am sorry to say I broke your bottle and at first I thought that Emmy would be blamed and then I did not feel so sorry because she is an only child, and as I am a middel child that is not cared for so much by its family——"

Her father had come without her hearing him. His hand upon her shoulder was her first knowledge of his presence. She started violently, began to cry in a shivering way, and turning away pressed her hands to her face.

"Oh, papa, I am sorry," she wept; "I really am sorry—I—broke—broke the bottle!—oh, papa, papa!"

Susy heard the paper rustle, as her father took up the letter and after a pause laid it down again. A deep silence followed before he lifted her in a gentle, strong way and sat down with her in his arms, both her cold hands held in his big one.

"Now, little woman, tell me all about it," he said, and it was his tone that gave her courage to lift her head and gaze at him through her tears.

He said the words to her quite as if she were a Youngest or Eldest child—indeed, he could not have spoken with more love and understanding if she had been an Only child.

DEATH OF AN OLD NEWSPAPER MAN

By the death of James T. White, who passed away last evening at the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. J. Flynn of 37 Union street, Watertown, Greater Boston loses one of its oldest and best known newspaper men. For the past three years Mr. White has been in failing health, never having recovered from a severe attack of grip which he suffered. On the thirteenth of last month Mr. White was stricken with a paralytic stroke at the corner of Boylston and Exeter street, Boston, and he never fully recovered consciousness.

Mr. White was a native of Carroll, N. Y., where he was born, October 3, 1843. As a young man he taught school and penmanship, and in later life was a salesman for 23 years for a large Boston publishing house. Before entering the book business he was a reporter and editor on New Bedford newspapers. For several years he was the Cottage City correspondent of the Boston Globe.

Mr. White retired from active work about three years ago and lived alternately with his daughters. He came from an old New England family, and his ancestors fought in the Indian and revolutionary wars. He is survived by his wife, two daughters, Mrs. Florence Hayden and Mrs. Helen M. Flynn. He was a member of several fraternal societies, including the Masons and the Odd Fellows.

Funeral services will be held Sunday at the home of his daughter, Mrs Florence Hayden, 24 Pearl street, Newton.
